

Monarchs in Peril

Ron Vanderhoff, Horticulturist

Wednesday, February 22, 2023 at 2:00 P.M.
Clubhouse One

Monarch butterflies are in peril; but gardeners can help. Ron will discuss the life history of these iconic butterflies and their current status in California. He will unravel some of the causes of their decline and some of the controversy about their possible recovery. He will also discuss the butterflies' intimate relationship with milkweed, the results of recent Orange County monarch surveys, their endangered species status and controversy but especially how gardeners can play an important role in their recovery.

Ron is the general manager of Roger's Gardens and the chair of plant science at the CA Native Plant Society in Orange County. He is a horticulturist and native plant botanist with a long history of involvement in local natural history and conservation.

Refreshments and a free raffle to follow.

Laguna Woods residents and guests are cordially invited to attend.
